

Altova to Participate in Software AG's Upcoming Seminar "XML: Theoretical to Practical What Really Works"

Altova will demonstrate the XMLSPY 5 and Tamino XML Server Integration on June 5th in Boston.

Beverly, MA, May 28, 2003. – Altova Inc. (<http://www.altova.com>), producer of XMLSPY, the world's leading XML development tool with over a million registered users, and today announced their participation in Software AG's Executive Breakfast. Mr. Larry Kim, Altova's Technical Director and expert on XML technologies, will demonstrate how XMLSPY 5 can manage and administer the Software AG Tamino XML Server, a high performance XML repository.

"The presentation will demonstrate the degree of ease-of-use by which developers can use the XMLSPY editing environment to search, open, edit, save, delete, convert, or validate XML documents to and from a Tamino XML Server", said Mr. Kim. "Using XMLSPY and Tamino XML Server, developers can implement powerful document framework applications for capturing and re-using business information, resulting in greater efficiencies and competitive advantages."

Software AG is the producer of the Tamino XML Server, a high-performance platform for storing, publishing and exchanging of XML documents, and is a leading global provider of system software and services enabling enterprise data integration and management. The Executive Breakfast seminar will be held June 5, in Boston, MA.
